The Solar System

The Solar System may be defined as consisting of all those objects that are governed by the Sun's gravitational field. Other effects arising (1) ... the proximity of the Sun could equally (2) ... be used as criteria, such as radiation pressure or interaction with the solar wind. (3) ... any of these definitions the Solar System extends (4) ... to a distance of about two light-years; the closest star, Proxima Centauri, (5) ... lying at a distance of slightly more than four light-years.

Our knowledge of this region of space certainly does not reach as far as this, (6) ... because the most distant Solar-System objects that we know about, the comets, seem to originate at a distance of no more than 50,000 astronomical units, or less than a third of the total distance. (7) ... for the other Solar-System bodies known to us, they lie at distances of less than a few hundred AU. Our study is therefore confined (8) ... what is primarily the central region of the Solar System.

The Concept of Evolution

Charles Darwin did not invent the concept of evolution. When he was a student in Edinburgh in the late 1820's, evolution was already the (1) ... ? of the town. But evolution was rejected by the establishment. Those who (2) ... ? to evolutionary thinking were called Lamarckists, after the French scientist Jean-Baptiste Lamarck, who was the first to propose that species are not static, but change over time and give (3) ... ? to new species. Lamarck had offered this (4) ... ? in a book published in 1809. He did not, however, propose a correct mechanism for (5) ... ? species change into each other. The mechanism was discovered first by Charles Darwin and independently by Alfred Russel Wallace. From reading the economist Thomas Malthus, Darwin was aware of the consequences of (6) ... ? growing populations. Once resources become limiting only a (7) ... ? of individuals can survive. Darwin was also an (8) ... ? observer of animal breeders. He analysed their methods and studied their results. Slowly he understood that nature like a gigantic breeder.

✓ A real example: Part 2 report

3. At the college where you study English, you recently organised a special day to raise money for charity. The Principal of the college has asked you for a report about the day. In your report, you should outline what activities were organised, evaluate the success of the day and make suggestions for future fundraising events.

Write your report.

✓ A real example: Part 2 review

2. You see this announcement in an international music magazine:

Music of your homeland

We would like to know which pieces of music readers feel represent their country well. Send us a review about two popular pieces of music from your country, comparing them, explaining which ways they reflect the positive aspects of your country's culture, and recommending which one a visitor to your country should definitely listen to.

We will publish the best review.
